OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian markets continued to edge higher in August driven by a continuation of economic recovery, better-than-feared interim corporate earnings and a weakening US dollar. Geopolitical tension continued as the US Commerce Department expanded the scope of its foreign-produced direct product rule to prevent Huawei from accessing products made using either US software or technology. Against this backdrop, Hong Kong performed the best led by financials and property as the city readies itself for the roll back of social distancing measures. China also outperformed as leading domestic companies reported robust earnings given resilience and market share gains. Australia did well thanks to strong tech performance and strong AUD appreciation. Korea lagged as foreign investors and local institutions net sold the market to take profit. Taiwan declined as technology shares were weighted by the US technology ban on Huawei. Most ASEAN markets underperformed dragged by a dismal earnings season. Overall, growth outperformed value and dividend this month.

Fund Performance. The Fund underperformed the benchmark. On the positive side, exposures to Chinese consumer names contributed. Macau gaming name Sands rebounded along with easing travel restrictions. On the negative side, lack of zero-yielding eCommerce exposures hurt again as Alibaba, Meituan and JD.com were top performers. Elsewhere, overweight in technology detracted as the US further tightened Huawei restrictions, whilst potential ban on Tencent Wechat platform in US weighed on sentiment for Apple supply chain.

Fund Strategy. Concerns surrounding the management of Covid remain present across almost all markets, with the possible exception of North Asia. In China especially, a strong policy response has helped curtail the spread of the disease and mitigate the economic slowdown. A weaker US dollar – typically positive for Asian equities - could be seen in the near term considering interest rate differential should remain low and US growth is unlikely to outperform the rest of the world. Overall Asian valuations remain in line with long term averages and earnings expectations have become less negative with positive revisions broadening out to more sectors. We maintain a diversified positioning in quality franchises, defensives and value cyclicals for both income and growth opportunities. Over the month, we further topped up quality yield exposures in technology, consumer and insurance while trimming selective telecom.
