OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian equities continued the winning streak supported by additional Chinese government stimulus policies, a more dovish Fed and continued expectation of a truce in the US-China trade war. The capitulation of the Fed has led to an inversion of the US yield curve and consequently a temporary sell-off in equities towards the end of the month. Overall, India performed the best on persistent foreign inflows driven by Trump's GSP revocation, easing geopolitical tensions and hopes of the ruling party coming back to power. China outperformed as investors were positive over the announcements from the National People's Congress. Meanwhile, ASEAN market generally lagged and Thailand fell as election concluded with official result yet to be announced. Korea ended down on lackluster earnings momentum. Over the month, growth index performed better than value index.

Fund Performance. The fund lagged the benchmark mainly dragged by country allocation. On the positive side, the overweight in real estate added the most value. The US 10-year treasury dropped by 30 basis points over the month and had driven real estate to be the best performing sector in the region. Our positions in REITs (which are bond proxies), all outperformed while developers rallied on policy easing and solid operation particularly in terms of investment property rental growth. Stock selection in industrials was another contributor. On the negative side, the underweight in India hurt. The country rallied last month over positive developments on both political and monetary fronts. The lack of dividend yield opportunities led us to have a structural underweight. In Korea, expectations for higher oil price (which may impact its input cost) and negative sentiment towards higher renewable energy targets under the next energy plan led to a sharp reversal.

Fund Strategy. Our core strategy remains unchanged with a preference for both low beta and value. Low beta stocks have higher earnings and dividend visibility offering better downside protection while value stocks have priced in more uncertainties offering more re-rating potential. The combination of these two factors should allow us to outperform during initial upturn of cycle as well as late to down cycle.
