OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian equities rebounded sharply in November, helped by less hawkish Fed comments, lower oil price, flattish US dollar and continuous policy support from the Chinese government. The first few positives helped current account deficit countries such as Indonesia and India. Against a backdrop of more supportive measures from the government, Hong Kong and China rebounded. There were also rising hopes for a ceasefire in the China/U.S. trade war (subsequently justified by a positive month-end meeting for Xi and Trump at the G20). On the macro front, China's October loan and total social financing came in lower than expected and the November manufacturing PMI dropped to 50, suggesting a continuous slowdown in economic activities.

Fund Performance. The fund lagged in this sharply rising market.

On the positive side, stock selection in Australia and Taiwan was strong. The overweight in Indonesia also added value as it rebounded on more favourable external environment and also encouraging results. On the negative side, the underweight in India hurt as it outperformed the region. In terms of stock selection, positions in China/ Hong Kong detracted, mainly because internet names such as Tencent and Alibaba rebounded sharply.

Fund Strategy. We believe the apparent change in tone at the Fed pulls forward the end of this tightening cycle, which is fundamentally bullish for equities in the near term. Moreover, the news on US-China trade is also quite positive in that it demonstrates the willingness of both parties to avoid the market's most feared scenarios, at least for the time being. Our focus on identifying income with value and low beta characteristics should allow us to outperform during initial upturn of cycle as well as late cycle to down cycle. Over the month, we added to quality cyclicals/ financials in Hong Kong, Australia and also upgraded quality of our defensive holdings.
