OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian equities suffered a sharp sell-off in October amid global weakness emanating from the US. Negative headlines on deteriorating US-China trade tensions, a spike in global yields and a resurgent U.S. dollar joined the persistent overhangs of weak China macro data and liquidity over the month. Korea, Taiwan and Chinese equities dragged the regional performance, while ASEAN and India fared better.

Fund Performance. The fund outperformed the benchmark driven predominately by strong stock selection.

On the positive side, stock selection in China contributed the most. Defensive toll road holdings including Jiangsu Expressway and Yuexiu Transport Infrastructure demonstrated resiliency in a volatile environment. Property developer China Overseas Land also outperformed on sign of policy loosening. Not owning any internet/ eCommerce names such as Tencent and Alibaba also helped. Elsewhere, classic defensives including Australian toll road operator Transurban, Singapore REITs and Telkom Indonesia fared well. Selective banking names like Bangkok Bank, Bank Mandiri, HSBC also contributed.

On the negative side, the underweight in India hurt as it outperformed the region. In terms of stock selection, BOC Hong Kong was among the top detractors. While the bank beat on net interest margin and asset quality remained stable, market was more concerned over weaker outlook on loan growth and fund sales. China Yongda Automobiles Services corrected sharply due to disappointing results, notably on new car margin. Sinopec Engineering also suffered and behaved like a high beta oil stock.

Fund Strategy. The selloff in Asian stocks this year has led to valuations that are quite attractive relative to history. Further, within the region it is obviously important to understand if there is any more deep-rooted slowdown in the corporate earnings cycle. Given the degree of pessimism in the market, if there are no sustained and widespread negative earnings surprises there is considerable potential for a meaningful bounce in Asian stocks. Monitoring earnings growth remains crucial. Over the last few months, defensives have entered our sweetspot and we have added to regulated utilities, toll road and REITs. This resulted in a more balanced portfolio of financials and defensives.
