OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines was up slightly by 0.35% in October with Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields flat month-on-month.

For the month of October, market movements were largely dictated by two events: the resurgence of the coronavirus disease (COVID19) in Europe, and the widely-anticipated US elections in early November. Investors opted to err on the side of caution and watch from the sidelines as European countries suffered a second wave of COVID19 infections, with some reporting new highs in infection rates. This resulted in governments re-imposing nationwide restrictions, prompting concerns of even slower growth in the region. Meanwhile, news on the virus took a back seat in the US as the country geared up for the upcoming presidential elections. Democratic candidate Joe Biden surged to a lead in the national polls held within the month, which improved market sentiment somewhat as an increased likelihood of a democratic sweep could resolve the continued gridlock in the White House on a new fiscal package. For the month, the benchmark 10-year US Treasury yield increased by 18.2 basis points to 0.859%.

In the local space, inflation data for the month of September came in at 2.3% year-on-year, meeting market expectations. Slowing food inflation from high base effects offset the continued increase in transport prices, with fares continuing to adjust upward due to decreased capacity as a result of pandemic-related regulations. While the government extended quarantine restrictions in the capital region to the end of November, risks of a slowdown due to budget concerns were alleviated as the 2021 budget bill moved closer to passage, having been ratified by congress and passed on to the Senate. With global credit ratings agencies and supranational institutions downgrading 2020 GDP but forecasting a recovery in 2021, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas kept policy rates constant in its meeting at the start of the month, but affirmed that it would continue to support economic growth with accommodative policy.

Fund Performance. The Fund rose by 0.10% in October, ahead of its benchmark by 9 basis points.

Fund Strategy. The fund will maintain its duration of less than 1 and will continuously look into corporate bonds for yield enhancement.
