OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines rallied 1.26% in November as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields declined by an average of 10 basis points (bps) across the curve.

Risk assets across the globe rallied for much of November as market players reacted to positive news in the development of coronavirus disease (COVID19) vaccines for three consecutive weeks. The first to announce a vaccine was Pfizer/BioNtech (90% effective), quickly followed by Moderna (95% effective) and AstraZeneca/Oxford (70% effective). Though the vaccines could still meet logistical difficulties in terms of worldwide distribution, sentiment was largely positive on the news. Some analysts, in fact, revised their projections for the global economic recovery earlier, to the first half of 2021. Meanwhile, the US presidential elections took center stage from early to mid-November, with Democratic candidate Joe Biden finally securing the win over Republican candidate and current President Donald Trump. The Democrats likewise retained narrow control of the House. However, control of the Senate remains to be decided in January 2021. For the month, the benchmark 10-year US Treasury yield rose as high as 0.98% before closing the month at 0.840%.

In the local economic space, October inflation came in at 2.5% year-on-year, slightly higher than the 2.4% median market projection. Food inflation due to supply constraints (particularly pork) was the main inflationary driver, with most other components of the inflation basket steady month-on-month. Mid-month, Philippine third-quarter GDP came in at negative 11.5% year-on-year, significantly lower than the median estimate of negative 9.6%, with pandemic-related declines in industry, services, and consumption spending, as well as typhoon-related damage, driving the lower growth figure. With national government agencies highlighting downside risks to their full-year growth forecasts, the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas unexpectedly cut policy rates by 25 bps in its mid-November meeting, emphasizing the need to support economic growth in response to typhoon-related damage and continuing pandemic-related drags.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 1.13% for the month, behind its benchmark index by 0.13%.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
