OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines jumped 3.16% in August as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields fell an average of 29 basis points across the curve.

The US Treasury yield curve continued to flatten amid concerns of a global growth slowdown as the US-China trade debacle persisted. Despite stronger-than-expected US retail sales data released mid-month, fears of a possible economic recession caused investors to err on the side of caution. Towards end-August, Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell spoke at the annual Jackson Hole Symposium, wherein he reiterated that while the US economy was in a favorable place, it still faced significant risks as growth overseas slowed amid trade uncertainty. Given the overall dovish tone seen for the month, the US 10-year benchmark yield plunged 51 basis points to close at a multi-year low of 1.50%. Meanwhile, the US 3-month benchmark yield only fell 8 basis points month-on-month to 1.98%

On the local space, inflation for the month of July came in below market expectations, rising 2.4% year-on-year, still within the central bank's target range of 2-4%. The minimal increase for the month reflected the slower annual rate posted by the food and non-alcoholic beverages component of the index. The 2nd quarter GDP growth figure was likewise released, with the economy expanding 5.5% year-on-year. This was lower than consensus estimates. Bulk of the drag in growth came from weak public consumption numbers and a contraction in overall investments. Benign inflation, coupled with weaker growth, prompted Central Bank Governor Benjamin Diokno to once again hint at policy easing. Nevertheless, monetary authorities will continue to vigilantly monitor economic data so as to determine an appropriate policy response moving forward.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 3.07% for the month, behind the benchmark index by 9 bps.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
