OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines fell by 1.43% in October as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved higher by an average of 18 basis points across the curve.

US Treasury yields rose in the first weeks of October amid hawkish commentary from various Federal Reserve members and persistent strength in employment data. In particular, Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Power remarked early during the month that the FOMC may exceed its neutral rate. He stated that the central bank would continue with its current pace of rate normalization as economic growth stabilized further. Minutes from the latest Federal Reserve meeting held last September likewise revealed that most board members favored pushing through with their planned rate hikes. However, geopolitical risks persisting in the Euro area, particularly in Italy, tempered the rise in safe-haven Treasury yields. As a result, the US 10-year benchmark yield rose 9 basis points month-on-month, closing October at the 3.15%.

On the local front, inflation for the month of September surged to a 9-year high of 6.7%, higher than the 6.4% posted in August. The uptrend was largely due to price increases in food and non-alcoholic beverages. The alcoholic beverages and tobacco category likewise posted a double-digit annual increase. Persistently high inflation has kept local market players erring on the side of caution, especially with the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP) retaining a hawkish tone amid rising price pressures. The BSP has its raised policy rates by 150 basis points in total since the beginning of the year. Monetary authorities will continue to vigilantly monitor economic data so as to determine the appropriate policy response moving forward.

Fund Performance. The fund returned -1.45% for the month, underperforming its benchmark by 2 basis points.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
