OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Chase Asia Total Return Philippines Bond Index (JACI Philippines) increased by 1.65% in June. Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved lower across the yield curve by an average of 12 basis points. The U.S. nonfarm payrolls for the month of May came in at only 38,000 (market estimate: 160,000), partly due to a labor strike from telecom giant Verizon. This weakness in labor data caused speculation that the Federal Reserve would delay increasing rates further, and effectively removed all bets for a June hike. True enough, the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC) decided to keep rates steady during its meeting concluded on June 15th. However, the so-called “dot plot” of future rate projections indicated that there was still a likelihood of two rate increases before the end of the year.

Meanwhile, markets were shocked by the U.K.’s decision to push through with a “Brexit” vote on June 23rd. This drove investors to safe-haven assets as they considered the negative consequences that such a decision might have on the global economy. Consequently, the 10-year U.S. Treasury yield fell to a historical low of 1.385%.

Fund Performance. The fund gained 0.10% in June, beating the benchmark by 7 basis points. It outperformed the benchmark by 55 basis points, with a return of 0.69%.

Fund Strategy. The fund will maintain its duration of less than 1 and will continue to look for opportunities to diversify into corporate bonds for yield enhancement.
