OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines lost 0.67% in December as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved higher across the yield curve by an average of 11 basis points.

Last December, the US Federal Reserve finally hiked interest rates by 25 basis points. Though this move was largely anticipated by the market, some investors were caught off guard by the change in projections for future hikes. Whereas Fed members initially projected just 2 hikes for 2017, rhetoric now indicated three possible hikes instead. Moreover, president-elect Donald Trump's promise of massive infrastructure spending led investors to believe that there was no way for interest rates to go but up. Adding to this sentiment was the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development's global growth forecast upgrade on the back of policies to be implemented by Trump. Likewise, the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries' (OPEC) move to cut oil production led to speculation that inflation would soon be on the rise. As a result, for the month of December, the 2- and 10-year US Treasury yields rose by 7 and 6 basis points, respectively.

On the local front, RoPs tracked US Treasuries, posting losses for the month. Data releases locally did little to help sentiment. For the month of October, the government posted a 6.8% yearly drop in spending. Consequently, the country's 10M2016 deficit amounted to only Php216 billion, which is just at 60% of the revised 2016 target. This ignited doubts that the country's 4Q16 GDP growth could match up to the 7.1% seen in the 3rd quarter.

Fund Performance. The fund rose by 0.11% in December, beating the benchmark by 7 basis points. In 2016, it outperformed the benchmark by 82 basis points with a return of 1.12%.

Fund Strategy. The fund will maintain its duration of less than 1 and will continuously look into corporate bonds for yield enhancement.
