OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines gained 1.07% in January as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved lower across the yield curve by an average of 4.4 basis points.

For the month of January, movements in global bond markets were driven by various economic data releases, statements from key members of the US Federal Reserve, and the inaugural speech as well as a series of executive orders from newly-elected US President Donald Trump. US non-farm payrolls last December were slightly lower than consensus expectations at 156,000 (market estimate of 178,000). However, average wages grew by 2.9% annually, the fastest pick-up in seven years. Meanwhile, speeches from various Federal Reserve members earlier during the month indicated support for up to two to three rate hikes in 2017. Hawkish rhetoric, combined with the strong wage growth, caused US Treasury yields to rise from the YTD low of 2.33%. Optimism that President Trump's executive orders were in partial fulfillment of his campaign promises on trade and immigration likewise drove preference for equities over US Treasuries.

On the local front, the country's 4Q16 GDP growth registered at +6.6%, bringing the full-year growth figure to meet the consensus estimate of +6.8%. Inflation remained benign at 2.6% last December. The country's strong fundamentals provided support for RoPs, resulting in a monthly gain.

During the month, the Philippine government successfully issued US$2 billion worth of 25-year RoPs, maturing February 2042 with a coupon rate of 3.7%. The issuance coincided with the US$500 million RoP17 maturity. The government was able to swap US$1.5 billion worth of high coupon or short maturity RoPs for the longer duration RoP42. Moreover, the government was able to fill its planned US$500 million of new money for the 2017 spending program.

Fund Performance. The fund rose by 0.14% in January, beating the benchmark by 10 basis points.

Fund Strategy. The fund will maintain its duration of less than 1 and will continuously look into corporate bonds for yield enhancement.
