OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Chase Asia Total Return Philippine Bond Index dropped by 0.28% in February. The decline in the prices of Philippine sovereigns largely tracked US Treasuries as demand for safe-haven assets eased after improved sentiment in Greece and Russia. At the same time, the rebound in oil prices caused US Treasury yields to increase by as much as 35 basis points during the month.

Greece received a four-month extension for the €240-billion bailout program that was originally due at the end of February. However, the Eurozone's finance ministers laid out a number of reforms that the Greek government has to make before more cash can be withdrawn from the bailout fund.

Russia and Ukraine agreed to a ceasefire after holding a peace summit in the city of Minsk. The deal between Ukraine and Russia-backed separatists include further discussions on giving the eastern region of Ukraine more autonomy.

Meanwhile, US Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen turned more dovish in her recent testimony to the US Congress. She said that central bank policies remain data-dependent and the decision to raise the federal funds rate "will not necessarily happen in the next couple of meetings."

Fund Performance. The fund gained by 0.16% in February, outperforming the benchmark by 30 basis points.

Fund Strategy. Moving forward, we look to maintain the Fund's underweight duration in light of the continued reduction in stimulus by the US Federal Reserve.
