Fund Manager's Report

Philippine USD-denominated ROP bond prices dropped by half a percent towards month-end as investors chose to stay on the sidelines while waiting for further details about the Federal Reserve's second round of quantitative easing (QE2). Particulars of the program, including the amount of asset purchases to be made by the Fed, were expected to be announced during the policy body's November 4 meeting. New issuances that offer higher yields over Philippine sovereigns such as the Petron Global Peso Note likewise took their toll on ROP bonds.

However, positive developments in the domestic economy, including news that the Philippine government incurred a 9-month budget deficit of PHP259Bn—well within target—and the continued low inflationary environment, provided stability to prices of dollar-denominated bonds. These were also reflected in the narrowing of the 5-year CDS spreads by 7 points down to the 131 levels.

Against this backdrop, the Fund continued to track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return index. Investors of the Fund are advised to pursue a long-term investment horizon.

Net Asset Value Per Unit

Risk Disclosure

An index tracker bond fund is suitable for investors who take medium to long-term views and want exposure to Philippine bonds. As a marked-to-market UITF, the Fund's yield, net asset value, and total return may fall as well as rise as a result of interest rate movements and the changes in credit quality of the investments. On redemption of units, an investor may receive an amount less than the original amount of the investment. Liquidity risk also needs to be taken into account.
