OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines lost 0.98% in January as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved higher by an average of 27 basis points across the curve. Global bond prices fell in January, driven by rising inflation expectations in the US, which bolstered speculation that the Federal Reserve could raise borrowing rates at least three times during the year. Expectations of rising inflation were largely due to the repatriation tax, imposed by the US Congress on multinational firms. For instance, Apple Inc. stated that it would bring hundreds of billions of overseas dollars back to the US both to pay taxes, and spend more on domestic jobs and manufacturing over the next few years. Hence, the US 10-year Treasury benchmark yield rose to as high as 2.7199% during the month, before closing January at the 2.7050% level.

The Philippine Bureau of the Treasury sold US$2 billion worth of 10-year RoP bonds during the month. The new RoP28, maturing February 1, 2028, was awarded at a coupon rate of 3%, lower than the initial price guidance of around 3.30%. Of the US$2 billion total issued, $750 million was sold for cash, while the rest was exchanged with existing debt. Demand for the paper was quite healthy, indicating continued investor confidence in the country's macroeconomic fundamentals.

On the local front, inflation remained steady at 3.3% in December. This brought the full-year average figure to 3.2%, still well within the BSP's targeted range of 2-4% for 2017. The country's GDP grew 6.6% YoY in 4Q17, buoyed by firm domestic demand, particularly from investments. Consequently, the country's GDP for the full year grew by an average of 6.7%, lower than 2016's 6.9% but still among the best in the region. Manageable inflation coupled with continued robust economic growth should allow the BSP to keep its policy rates accommodative.

Fund Performance. The fund returned negative 0.97% for the month, beating of its benchmark by 1 basis point.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
