OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index (JACI) Philippines gained 0.86% in June as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved lower across the yield curve by an average of 10 basis points.

Bond prices were well-supported for most of the month as investors reacted to a number of disappointing data releases from the US, as well as statements from several Federal Reserve members which suggested inflation for 2017 could fall short of the 2.0% target. US non-farm payrolls released in the first week of June showed a 138,000 increase, much lower than the market expectation of 182,000. Lackluster manufacturing, jobless claims and home sales data released thereafter likewise reinforced the view of weaker inflation moving forward. Hence, though the Federal Reserve hiked interest rates by 25 basis points in its FOMC meeting last June 13-14, the 10-year US Treasury yield fell to as low as 2.1250% earlier during the month.

Towards the end of the month however, European Central Bank President Mario Draghi spoke of “strengthening and broadening recovery in the Euro-zone” while reiterating that stimulus was still necessary. Nevertheless, some market players took it as a signal of monetary policy tightening and sold off their bond holdings. The US 10-year Treasury benchmark yield consequently ended June at the 2.3054% level.

Local inflation for the month of May eased to a four-month low of 3.1%, slower than the 3.4% registered in April. The slowdown was in line with market expectations and still within the BSP’s targeted range of 2-4% for 2017. Manageable inflation coupled with continued strong economic growth should allow the BSP to keep its policy rates accommodative.

Fund Performance. The fund returned 0.77% for the month, underperforming its benchmark by 9 basis points.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
