OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Asia Credit Index - Philippines (JACI Philippines) went down by 3.07% in November as Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields moved higher across the yield curve by an average of 38.5 basis points.

Poor market sentiment was exhibited at the start of the month given looming US Presidential elections. Economic data releases were relatively ignored, though coming in at a relatively healthy number of 161k only slightly lower than market expectations of 173K. Volatility was seen as the results of the US election surprised the market with Donald Trump as the incoming President. US Treasuries increased significantly to 2.3% as of month end coming from 1.8% prior to the elections.

Although the FOMC kept the policy rate unchanged, a hike in December was hinted. This was further supported with FED Chair Yellen testifying before the Joint Economic Conference last November 17, 2016. Yellen said that continuous job creation and rise of inflation would likely signal the central bank to raise interest rates. Moreover, she reiterated that FED rate increases will remain gradual.

Fund Performance. The fund returned -2.99% for the month, outperforming its benchmark by 8 basis points. The fund underperforms its benchmark by 59 basis points on a year-to-date basis.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
