OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The JP Morgan Chase Asia Total Return Philippines Bond Index (JACI Philippines) returned 1.91% in March. Philippine dollar-denominated bond yields declined by an average of 20bps.

Earlier this month, the European Central Bank held their meeting addressing the threat of deflation by cutting its interest rate further to -0.4%, increasing its Quantitative Easing Program by €20 Bn ($22 Bn) and implementing a 4-year loan program that gives potential subsidies to lenders. In addition, their outlook for 2016 to 2018 has been revised down for inflation and GDP reflecting weakening global prospects. The central bank also unexpectedly hinted this would be their last time to cut rates.

In the FOMC meeting, disclosures on member's expectations of year end policy rate levels implied two hikes coming down from December's four hikes. The committee still remains dovish as they monitor global conditions. Despite positive economic releases, global conditions still continue to pose a risk. The FED chair, Janet Yellen, said that the board is to proceed cautiously in raising rates.

Fund Performance. The fund gained 1.68% for the month, missing its benchmark by 23 basis points. The fund underperforms its benchmark by 22 basis points on a year-to-date basis.

Fund Strategy. The Fund will continue to closely track changes to the JPMorgan Asia Credit Total Return Index. Investors in a bond fund must be prepared to withstand volatility as higher investment value is typically achieved over the medium to long term.
