OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. Asian markets pulled back this month on continued weakness in global PMI and pressure from strong USD. Earnings failed to inspire, so again markets focused on potential easing and stimulus policies which led China and Korea to outperform. China rallied on speculation that the government would enact further policies to support growth, and in Korea markets welcomed the surprise rate cut. Australia underperformed as commodity prices reversed their gains from the previous month, causing the AUD to also weaken. Elsewhere, Taiwan was dragged down by a pullback in the technology names and ASEAN was generally weak.

Fund Performance. The portfolio underperformed this month mainly due to the currency impact. On the positive side, stock selection in Australia was strong. Spotless, which provides cleaning and catering services, rose 10.9% (in AUD) on the back of solid results. The interim dividend also beat expectation with a payout ratio of 75%. Other financial stocks like Macquarie Group also continued to do well. In Singapore, DBS resumed its winning trek in March after consolidating in January and February. The bank posted strong results with net interest margin expansion. In China, toll road stocks performed strongly on solid results. On the negative side, the underweight and stock selection in China did not help. China was the best performing market in March, hence high beta stocks generally outperformed. Not owning Tencent also hurt as the stock reported solid results. In Hong Kong, HSBC remained under pressure. Transportation/ infrastructure name NWS Holdings corrected due to weak result; the transport business was affected by the Occupy Central movement in Hong Kong in 4Q14.

Fund Strategy. The recent strength of Asian equities has been more a function of liquidity rather than earnings expectations (which continue to drift downwards). Therefore, valuations have increased and are at 3 year highs. We believe it ever more important to stay valuation focused during this period; we have actively pruned our portfolio such that our average P/E is now almost two multiples below the index.
