OUTLOOK AND STRATEGY

Market Review. The Asia Pacific ex- Japan market rose in the month, with disparate performance across the region. Macro trends once again dictated market movements, with commodities continuing their decline and yields falling globally as more countries joined the monetary easing cycle. Thailand and China were the best performing markets. Thailand benefited from the oil price decline, which showed through in December current account surplus. Heavy-weight technology stocks helped to propel the Chinese and Korean markets higher. On the other hand, the broader Australian market was pulled down by the commodities-related sectors.

Fund Performance. The portfolio underperformed this month as asset allocation and stock selection detracted. The zero weight in Tencent and overweight in HSBC was the key detractor in Hong Kong. Although we were not able to participate in the strong rally of a few large cap tech names (low yielding), this was offset by positive contributions from our defensive holdings in toll roads/utilities and infrastructure space. Furthermore, much value was added by our currency hedges, which protected us from steep falls in the AUD.

Fund Strategy. Global rates are expected to stay at historically low levels, in this environment we believe that our balanced portfolio continues to offer an attractive yield. The macro backdrop is remarkably complex at this moment with widely varying trends across countries both in the developed and emerging worlds. This has and will continue to lead to widely varying performance amongst stocks and bonds, which provides opportunities for bottoms up selection.
